

Lewis Hine Project Description:

The Lewis Hine Documentary Fellowship has afforded me the resources and opportunity to develop a collaborative documentary series with the Boston Chinatown Neighborhood Center (BCNC). For more than forty years, BCNC has been Boston's primary bilingual and multigenerational service-orientated resource for the Asian American community. With my partnership with BCNC, I am developing a documentary film series about immigrant and first generation Asian American children in the city. I am primarily working with Chinese youth and their families to share stories about their life in Boston, and how that relates to the multicultural constructs of Chinatown. Our project aims to bring voice to Chinatown's rich cultural presence and relevance in Boston from the youth perspective.
